Skype isHD calls that make high-definition video calls have clear video quality, the audio is synchronized, and the experience makes you look as if you're sitting in front of someone else. However, skype calls in full HD have some technical requirements. You need a fast smartphone or computer, a high-definition camera, and a high-speed network with sufficient bandwidth (1.5 Mbps or higher). Other Skype callers won't be available for HD calls unless they use a high-speed network connection, high-definition cameras, and modern equipment. The steps in this article apply to Mobile devices and Macs and PCs with Skype version 4.1 and later. Once you've confirmed that Setup meets the above requirements, you can start an HD call from the Skype app or using Skype Online. In the Skype app, click the Call button in the upper-left corner. Depending on your Skype version, this button will be named Call. From the list of contacts, find the contact you want to invite to the call. Select the video button on the right side of that contact to instantly start the video call. Here are the steps to make a video call from the Skype website: Click the Call button. Click the Video Call button to contact your contact. There is also a Video Call button in the upper-right corner of the conversation. If you're using an iPhone 5, a fourth-generation iPad, or a later version of one of your devices, you can use the Skype app to make HD calls. Here's how to do it: Tap the Calls menu at the bottom of the Skype app. Find the contact to start the video call. Tap the camera icon to the right of the user to call it immediately. Alternatively, tap the name of the person you want to contact and select Video Calls from the open window. If your Skype call is not in HD or not working at all, your program may be inging with performance issues. You may need to troubleshoot common issues with Skype, but you may experience problems: Skype versions are not up-to-date. Your internet connection may be slow, or other programs may be consuming bandwidth. I don't have an HD camera. Other applications use the RAM required for Skype to function properly. The Skype service may be down. Skype does not have the appropriate permissions for the camera and microphone. If the content is king, the video is the jewel in the crown of the online world.
